Sales List No.1

2003 USA → Iraqis

Notes: President George W. Bush announced the opening of the second Persian Gulf War at 10:15 pm on 19 March 2003, just 90 minutes after the deadline for President Saddam Hussein to exile himself and his sons from Iraq.
On 20 March the U.S. First Marine Division crossed the border at 9 pm and advanced.
On 2 May 2004 President Bush declared on the U.S. aircraft carrier Abraham Lincoln “Mission Accomplished”. But “mission” was not yet accomplished and the war and dropping of leaflets continued.
The leaflets offered for sale here are arranged in alphabetical and numerical order of code printed on the leaflets.

Notes: After the Death of the Communist dictator Josef B. Tito Yugoslavia fell apart, several republics were founded. Soon border disputes developed and open war broke out. The United Nations tried to mediate and asked the US to airdrop food supplies for the civilian population. To warn the military and civilian population four different leaflets were used in 1993. The texts are similar in Serbian language (Cyrillic letters) on one side and in Croat, Bosnian languages (Latin letters) on reverse; American flag or United Nations emblem were used as a background: "[American, Attention!] aircraft will be dropping humanitarian aid for all people. Do not fire on American aircraft. Food and medical supplies are intended for all people."

Cold War 1959 – 1972

Propaganda Leaflets for the Enemy in War
at Fixed Prices

Sales List No.1

1959 – 1972 East Germany → West Germans

Note: During the Cold War in Germany, 1959 – 1972, aerial propaganda leaflets were exchanged across the demarcation line. In the beginning financing was provided by the secret services of the USA and USSR respectively. In later years the two Germanies took over, closely watched and controlled by the two super powers. The West used almost exclusively balloons, and the East small paper rockets to disseminate leaflets in each others countries of interest. Millions of leaflets were disseminated, but almost all have disappeared. Today only a few historians are aware of what had been going on in the Cold War. Dissemination of leaflets stopped in 1972 when West- and East-Germany agreed to do so in a treaty.

This “black” leaflet newspaper disseminated by West-Germany used only the title as camouflage. The origin of the leaflet was evident by the beginning of the text of the subtitle. Euro 37

The “ball” of about 12 cm diameter, see photograph on the right, was used by East-Germany “since a decade” to transport leaflets across the demarcation line. West-Germany used mostly balloons to disseminate leaflets eastwards, this method was simple, far reaching and relatively more accurate than the East-German “balls”.
